A Weekend for Men
August 24th - 26th, 2007

REGISTRATION IS NECESSARY

near Belfair, Washington

Once again men will gather at a remote location in the Pacific Northwest. Men will experience this life-changing weekend event centered around a story of a young male warrior and his initiation into the meaning of manhood.

In most primal cultures men were welcomed into the community of men by the elders of the tribe. Each man experienced a ritual event and process which severed his life from that of his past as a boy. The ritual was one that often involved the person's confrontation with danger and possible death. For each man there was a death: His old way of being died. He was called to take on a new life, that of being a man with the responsibilities and privileges of manhood. The elders of the tribe guided the new men in the ways of mature masculinity.

Most men in our culture, without the guidance of trusted elders, stumble in their search for the meaning of their own maleness. These men most often learn what being a man is from their mothers, from uncommunicative or absent fathers, from detached heroes of film and television, or from equally misinformed peers. The resultant loss of masculine identity is deeply felt by the uninitiated male.

Register now for this weekend journey into a deeper male consciousness where male spirit, wild and tender, is affirmed and celebrated. This will make a difference in your life.

“The man who claims his shadow, claims his life.”
